

Colosa debuts new ProcessMaker plug-in for Openbravo ERP at the Openbravo World Conference

- ProcessMaker integration with Openbravo debuts at European open source conference -

Brooklyn, NY – April 17, 2009 – Colosa, the developer of open source business process management (BPM) software, ProcessMaker, has announced it will debut its newly-released Openbravo plug-in at the Openbravo World Conference, taking place in Barcelona from April 17-19, 2009.

The plug-in will allow Openbravo's award-winning Enterprise Resource Management (ERP) software and ProcessMaker to share information and work together as one. Data can be shared, and approvals that are associated with expense reports, inventory management processes and other ERP workflows are all streamlined through the use of ProcessMaker's BPM software.

Brian Reale, CEO of Colosa, said, "We will be having demos at Openbravo World Conference to demonstrate how the new integration between Openbravo and ProcessMaker automates the approval processes and in doing so saves users time and paper. We will take a look particularly at the Expense Report Process and what it means for finance departments."

The new ProcessMaker plug-in for Openbravo is available at <http://forge.openbravo.com/projects/processmakerwebservice>

Who: Brian Reale, CEO and co-founder of Colosa, the developer of ProcessMaker, a leading commercial open source Business Process Management (BPM) software solution. With over 12 years of developing technology companies, Reale is an expert in open source technologies and process management.

What: "Exploiting BPM and ERP Implementation Opportunities" will be a session led by Brian Reale which will demonstrate how ProcessMaker can streamline workflow within Openbravo's system. The new plug-in will be showcased and attendees will gain an understanding of how it works and how they can use it.

The Openbravo World Conference will see the largest global gathering of Openbravo community members to date. The Openbravo World Conference will feature sessions from community members sharing their experience from working with Openbravo ERP.

When: "Exploiting BPM and ERP Implementation Opportunities" will be presented on April 19, 2009 at 2:00-2:30 p.m.

Where: NH Costanza. Deu i Mata 69-99, Barcelona, Spain 08029.
