

Dear ProcessMaker Community,

As the economy slows, IT executives are challenged to deliver value to stay ahead of the competition, but with squeezed budgets.

Companies of all sizes are achieving greater ROI by implementing Open Source software. Many IT executives claim financial responsibility as the chief reason they look at Open Source software in the first place, but more interestingly the chief reason they invest in Open Source is the added flexibility their organizations will achieve.

CorraTech, the leading Open Source software services firm based here in New Jersey is inviting companies in the New York/New Jersey area to join us to meet three Open Source software companies at our “Open Source Holiday Cocktail Reception” focused on maximizing IT ROI. We are delighted to present our guests:

Viktor Nordstrom, Senior Channel Manager, will talk about Openbravo.

Openbravo: Dedicated to “Opening ERP’s Future” with their robust Open Source ERP and POS products.

Brian Reale, CEO will talk about ProcessMaker

ProcessMaker: Simplifying workflows for organizations to automate document intensive, approval-based processes across various systems including finance, HR and operations.

Robin Barley-Waegener, Channel Account Manager, will talk about Canonical

Canonical: Devoted to engineering and distributing the fastest growing Linux operating system to facilitate the growth and development of the Open Source community.

The event will take place at Halcyon, 144 Walnut Street (Montclair, NJ) on December 4th, 2008 from 4:00p p.m. - 6:00 p.m. A 30-minute train ride from Manhattan and a 1-minute walk. Enjoy a good Open Source discussion, excellent food and fine wine.

To guarantee your place, please register by November 10th for a 50% discount on the attendance fee of $150. Visit <http://www.opensourceevent.com> to register.
